2007 World Car of the Year Winners

The ultimate automotive award

The Lexus LS 460 was named 2007 World Car of the Year by a jury of top automotive journalists at the New York International Auto Show on Thursday.

The Audi RS4 was honored as World Performance Car of the Year. The Mercedes-Benz E320 Bluetec diesel sedan as World Green Car of the Year and the Audi TT as World Car Design of the Year.

2007 World Car of the Year: Lexus LS 460

The LS 460 was chosen from a field of 28 nominees. It offers the world's first eight-speed automatic transmission. It also is renown as the first car that can parallel park itself, with a little help from cameras, computers and, oh yes, a driver. The two other finalists were Audi's new TT sports car and BMW's 2007 Mini.

2007 World Performance Car of the Year: Audi RS 4

Developed by Audi's Quattro GMBH performance tuning division, the RS 4 drew the most votes among 17 World Performance Car of the Year contenders, including fellow finalists BMW 335i and Porsche 911 Turbo. Its high-revving, direct-injected, naturally aspirated 4.2-liter V8 channels 420 horsepower through Audi's asymmetric torque distribution Quattro all-wheel drive and can propel this lightening-quick small sedan from zero to 60 mph in 4.8 seconds.

2007 World Green Car of the Year: Mercedes-Benz E320 Bluetec

Mercedes-Benz's E320 Bluetec sedan was voted World Green Car of the Year from a field of 14 nominees. The company's first of a family of high-tech diesel cars that combine multiple technologies to meet stringent (U.S. and coming European) emissions standards requiring diesels to be as squeaky clean as modern gasoline engines, its surprisingly civilized new 3.0-liter turbocharged, piezo direct-injected V6 diesel engine delivers 208 hp and 388 lb.-ft. of torque through a seven-speed automatic transmission. The two other finalists were BMW's Hydrogen 7 sedan and Volkswagen's Polo BlueMotion diesel.

2007 World Car of the Year Winners

The ultimate automotive award

By Gary Witzenberg

provided by: autoMedia auto news you can trust

2007 World Design Car of the Year: Audi TT

For 2007 World Car Design of the Year, a panel of highly respected design experts chose three finalists from the 28 WCOY nominees: the 2007 Audi TT, Citroen C4 Picasso and Fiat Grande Punto. The jury then voted Audi's new TT (coupe and roadster) the overall winner. Styled under the leadership of Audi chief designer Walter de'Silva, it is slightly larger, crisper and more dynamic than the first-generation TT, with Audi's large "single-frame" grille framed by a V-shaped domes hood and side character creases from headlamp to taillamp.

Judging

With so many "Car of the Year" awards handed out in this country and around the world, most believe the most credible and meaningful are those given by juries of leading automotive journalists. Why? Because objective, experienced auto critics regularly test and evaluate new cars and trucks as part of their jobs, and they are presumably unaffected by advertising or anyone in the business of designing, building or selling vehicles.

It was just three years ago when a group of Asian, European and North American writers assembled a Steering Committee, recruited a jury of top auto writers from multiple countries, nominated 36 new-car candidates, conducted two rounds of voting and named its first World Car of the Year in February, 2005. They added the three category awards for 2006. The purpose of the World Car of the Year awards is to "recognize and reward automotive excellence on a global scale and make consumers aware of that recognition." Congratulations to this year's winners.
